Hunt's Ketchup

Hunt's ketchup is going through an interesting innovation. Next month, Hunt's will introduce a new type of ketchup mixed with balsamic vinegar and a mixture of spices. And what does it taste like? Well, visitors of the International Food Fair, which took place last weekend, tried it. They said the taste was 'really interesting' and 'richer', with oriental spices, which you can get only in specialised spice shops. If you want to try it, you'll have to be fast. But don't think you can get it in your local shops. Starting September 14, this special ketchup will be sold only on Hunt's Facebook page. The company will only be using this social media to advertise and sell the product. The limited-edition ketchup will only be available until December. Are you going to try it? Tell us on Facebook and Twitter!

25 Where can you buy the limited edition of Hunt's ketchup?

- A) in local shops
- B) on the Internet
- C) in special spice shops

Mammoth

One day, an 11-year-old boy from Taymyr in northern Russia decided to explore the tundra in his neighbourhood. At that time, he couldn't have known what he would find: a mammoth! At first the boy smelled a terrible smell and then he noticed something strange sticking out of the ground – a mammoth's foot. The boy's parents immediately announced the discovery and scientists from Taymyr Museum hurried to the tundra where they found out the basic information about the animal. The mammoth, later named Zhenya after the boy's nickname, died about 30,000 years ago at the age of 15 and had been frozen in ice ever since. It will be exhibited at the Taymyr Museum, but before the first visitors can see it, it will be examined by the scientists from the Zoological Institute in Moscow.

Do It Yourself Fan

Josh Young from Exeter went into his wine cellar to build a new wall and ended up caught behind it all weekend. It isn't clear why he blocked up the entrance but it is evident that after finishing the wall in the cellar, he celebrated with his best wine and fell asleep. Unfortunately, he was on the wrong side of the wall. After two days underground, Josh started to hit the wall leading to his neighbours' house with a hammer¹ to get out of the cellar. When the neighbours heard the loud noise, they called the police. As soon as Josh broke through the wall to the neighbours' cellar, two policemen were waiting for him and he was arrested for criminal damage. It isn't clear why he didn't demolish the wall he had built but the police think he was too proud of his work to destroy it.

Nowadays anyone can buy a pillow in a supermarket and the only problem is finding the right pillow for a comfortable and healthy night's sleep. But it wasn't always so. Some ancient cultures used pillows made from stone or wood, which supported the sleeper's head. The first textile pillows were enjoyed only by royal families and other rich people. Lower-class people like farmers used simple pillows made from dried grass, or they slept with their arms under their heads. When the first factories started producing suitable materials for them, it was possible to buy various kinds of pillows. They definitely were not as comfortable or healthy as the pillows we use today. Thankfully, modern pillows are made from softer materials.

Back to Front Manual

Emma Oldroyd has published the Back to Front Manual that writes about the way people in England can change their small front gardens. She was inspired by the Bangladeshi people living in Leeds, UK, and their front gardens. There is such a contrast between their front gardens and some of those next door, which are full of rubbish people can't recycle, old tyres and furniture, or, at best, are only covered with grass. Oldroyd's manual wants to make people in the UK use their front gardens for growing fruit and vegetables, instead of just growing grass or making their own car parks out of them. This change wouldn't only save them money but would also improve the look of the street or enable neighbours to talk about gardening and to share their products.

(www.leedsmet.ac.uk, przekształcono)

29 What does the Back to Front Manual advise people?

It advises them to:

- A) share car parks in front gardens.
- B) recycle rubbish from front gardens.
- C) make grass in front gardens perfect.
- D) produce fruit and vegetables in front gardens.

Our Origin

The idea for The Tech Museum was only a dream back in 1978 when the Junior League of Palo Alto first got the idea to create a dynamic learning centre for science and technology in Silicon Valley. Twelve years later, in 1990, The Tech Museum opened its doors downtown on San Carlos Street and quickly became a valuable educational centre. Just eight years later, 'The Tech' moved into a bigger building on San Jose Street. You can visit us here 360 days a year. Our orange and blue building is hard to miss!

About The Tech Museum

The museum is composed of three floors. The ground floor has the main entrance, a gift shop and café, an area that is reserved for special events and the IMAX Tech Cinema. In this cinema you can watch unique educational films. Four major theme exhibitions and labs fill the first and second floor.

Plan your visit

Opening times of The Tech Museum: 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.*

Please allow at least 2 hours for your visit. On weekday mornings the museum is always full of people. Many school trips and youth groups visit us at this time. This is why we recommend you to plan your visit for a weekday afternoon or weekend morning. Only then can we guarantee that you will enjoy the exhibitions in a relaxed atmosphere and without the crowds.

Closing times and holiday hours are changed every year. For current closing days see our websites.*

Last Hour Discount:

Arriving an hour before the closing time of The Tech Museum may not give you enough time to see all exhibitions. Therefore, during the last hour, Museum Exhibitions tickets have a 50% discount. This discount cannot be used for IMAX Tech Cinema tickets.

Seaweed¹

When I was growing up, my family ate a lot of unhealthy food. But one day my dad came home with boxes full of healthy seaweed cookies. He didn't want us to taste it or start eating healthier, he only planned to start selling the product at his shop and store it in our garage. However, when he brought the seaweed cookies home, we were very curious about their taste, of course, because none of us had ever heard of seaweed until that day. In fact, it became well known in the U.S. only a few years later.

When we first tasted it, my brother Nick and I didn't like it. But over time I gradually grew to like these seaweed cookies. We had an opportunity to try them in different flavours too, for example, mint or chocolate, but neither of them was as good as the natural one, which was my dad's favourite, too. Nick didn't share our opinion. To him the cookies seemed to have no taste, no matter what flavour they were. Our mum, on the other hand, liked them with any flavour immediately.

Back then I didn't understand the benefits of eating seaweed. It was believed that it could cure arthritis, but that has never been proved. Nowadays, scientists say that although seaweed doesn't help to fight obesity, it's rich in minerals and should become a part of an everyday healthy diet. This is possible because seaweed can be produced any month of the year, so you can find it in shops any time you want to have it. However, not everyone can buy it because it is not a cheap product.

The seaweed industry is big business nowadays. China and Japan, for example, grow huge amounts of cultivated seaweed for their own food industry. Another big producer, Bangladesh, has 25,000 km² of sea area that contains 133 kinds of wild seaweed. Eight of these kinds of natural, non-cultivated seaweed are sought-after by the biggest Asian companies. These companies buy them from local farmers and use them to make food products which they export mainly to the U.S.

When my father started selling seaweed products in his shop, not many people were interested in them, but nowadays they are very popular. My colleagues in the office love them, too. They say it's a great way to get minerals into their diet, and they are right. However, the days when I ate seaweed are over. Have you read about the recent level of seawater pollution and all the bad things seaweed absorbs from the highly contaminated sea water? Well, I have. It's true that I ate tons of it few years ago, but at that time, the ocean ecosystem was much healthier than today. That's why all the popularity and health benefits of seaweed cannot make me start eating it again.
